Purpose

Personal, Social, Health and Economic education (PSHE education) promotes students' personal, social and emotional development, as well as their health and wellbeing. It provides the knowledge, skills and attributes pupils need to lead healthy, safe, responsible and fulfilled lives. Pupils learn about businesses and different types of work, how to manage money and budget. At Ratton, we ensure that this policy reflects all of the strands of the ‘Every Child Matters’ agenda.

PSHE education will become statutory in 2011. PSHE education provides a framework within which schools can fulfill their legal responsibilities to promote the well-being of pupils, provide advice and guidance on sex, relationships and drugs, as well as offering careers education and work-related learning.

PSHE education has been split into two areas:

- Economic wellbeing and financial capability, which brings together careers education, work-related learning, enterprise, and financial capability
- Personal wellbeing, which concentrates on the personal development of pupils and covers sex and relationships, as well as drugs education. We look at personal safety (through a significant drama scheme in years 8/9) and the development of positive relationships with others, including team work and anti-bullying.
